UN commission on 2014 Gaza conflict delays report until June

-, 09.03.2015, 18:07 Time

USPA News - An independent United Nations (UN) inquiry to investigate reported violations of international humanitarian law during last year's conflict in Gaza said on Monday that it needs to delay its report from March until June to better assess newly-received information. "The Commissioners have indicated their desire for more time in order to assess the information that they have collected - much of which has only been received in recent weeks," the commission said in a statement. "These are complex issues - weighing the facts and considering the legal questions that arise is something that should not be rushed under any circumstances." Ambassador Joachim Ruecker, President of the UN Human Rights Council, expressed his support for the request.

"I support the request for additional time vis-à-vis the Human Rights Council, in order to allow them to finalize a comprehensive report as mandated," he said. A statement issued by the United Nations Independent Commission of Inquiry on the 2014 Gaza Conflict is copied below, followed by a statement of UN Human Rights Council President Joachim Ruecker.
